Discussion of NWS Forecasts Mississippi Delta Region*
December 29 – January 4, 2005
SYNOPSIS

Satellite image with enhanced low cloud-top temperatures for 6:45 a.m. EST (NOAA)

Another week of above normal temperatures is forecasted by the National Weather Service. Chances of rain stay in the forecast every day until after the cold front moves through next week, but rainfall amounts are forecasted to be light with a greater chance of rain and amounts in the southern part of the state.

Today, temperatures should reach the lower 50s in the north Delta to the middle 60s in the southern Delta. Tonight's low temperatures are forecasted to be in the upper 30s in the north to lower 40s in the south.

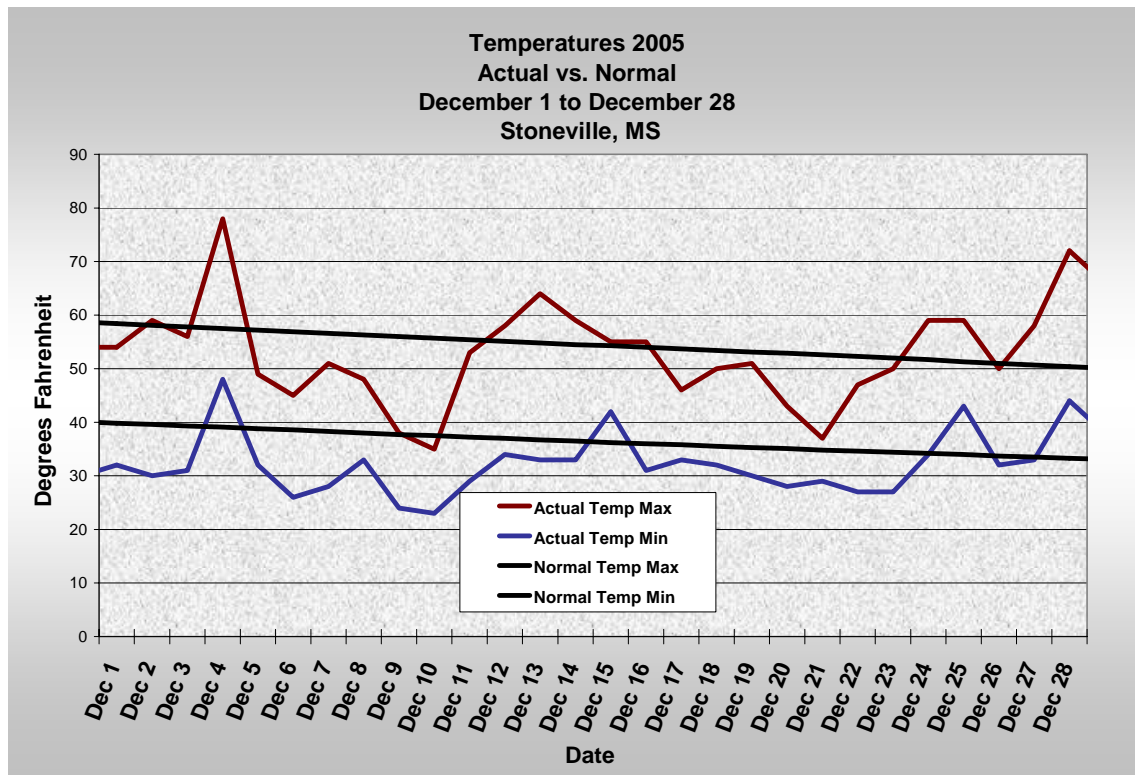

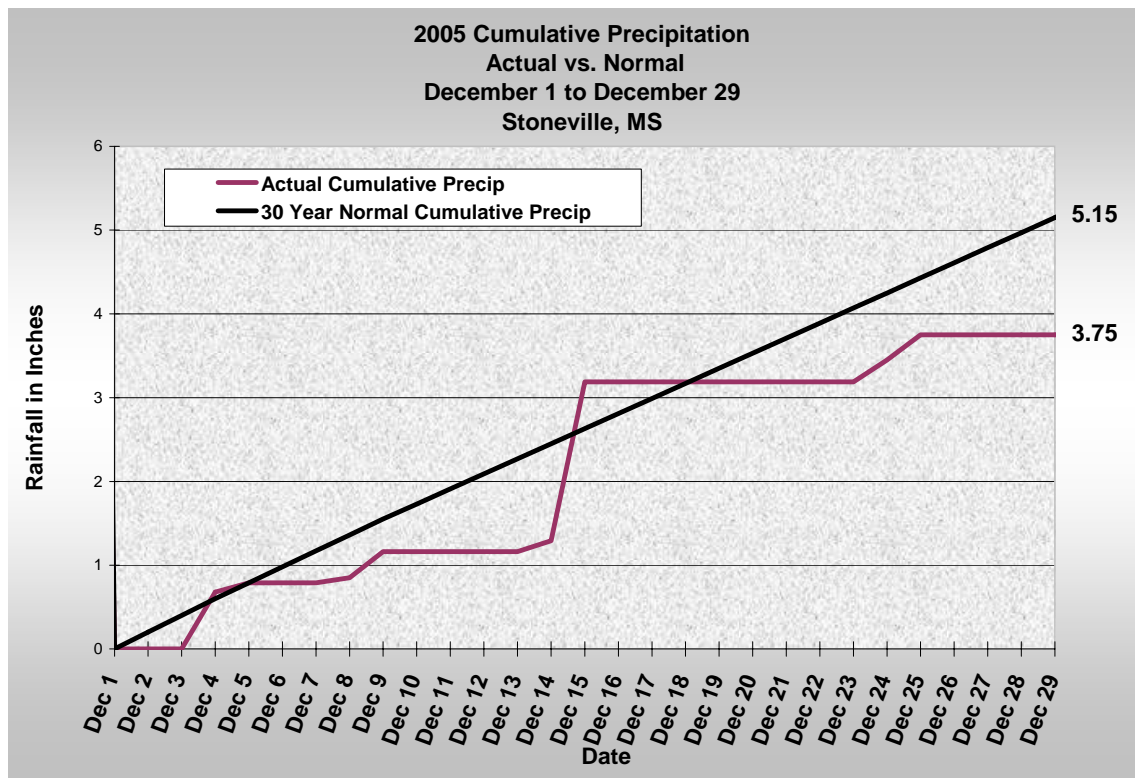

From tomorrow through Monday, expect a gradual warming trend with highs reaching the middle 60s to lower 70s by Monday. Low temperatures are forecasted to be in the low 40s to near 60, in the south Delta, by Monday morning. A cold front is then expected to bring some rain and cooler temperatures to the area as lows drop into the 40s and 50s and high temperatures drop back to the 50s and 60s by Wednesday.
